Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.The first book in a landmark trilogy, CANDLES UNDER THE CRESCENT is the shockingly dark and gripping tale of Kamram Khan, a twenty-something-year-old Persian Royal attending Oxford University in England, where he is quite the ladies man living a rather un-Islamic, free and hedonistic lifestyle. One night, Kamram s father Amin Khan, an oil rich Persian King and prominent Shia Muslim who oppose the right-wing Regime in his homeland of Iran, is assassinated while being chauffeured to a secret meeting in neighboring Afghanistan. When Kamram receives this news via digital wire in England, he is at once forced to leave university and return home to tend to his family back in the Islamic Republic of Iran. Almost immediately he is marked for death by tyrannical government hardliners. Kamram and his family resides in a historic castle in the rebellious Southeastern region of the country, where the Khan tribe and anti-government sentiment are very strong. It is from this castle that Kamram, the newly anointed Shah (or King), runs a shadow government outside the official government headquartered in Tehran,...
