Excerpt: . . . 11 there is a cost per worker, particularly when you add up how many because the turnover is so high. Retention is not the only benefit. There was a study of 28 leading corporations that have implemented flexible schedules. They find positive effects on employee commitment, employee satisfaction, productivity, cycle time, customer commitment, response time. Here is what we do not talk about: What it costs not to do these things, having these outdated workplace rules, and what it means that we need to change. The new rules we need include a guaranteed minimum number of paid sick days. Access and affordable family leave for everyone paid for by some kind of a shared pool, shared risk. Quality, afford-able dependent care. It means a reasonable work week without mandatory overtime, and it means a meaningful wage floor. Be-cause...
